Can you think of your own title of your story?

They were swarming onto the ship like ants, their cutlasses glinting in the Caribbean sunshine. They attacked from everywhere, jumping from the decks, swinging from the rigging and clambering over the side of the ship. Their cannons had blasted gaping holes into our sails slowing down our escape from the huge galleon that had appeared on the horizon only minutes earlier.

Can you start your story by going right into the action? Use lots of verbs (action words) and add description.
