

Q5: 'The pirate tilted his head and a look of confusion spread across his face.'

Why do you think that the pirate was confused?

---

---

---

Q6: "Erm... hello there, sir... are you okay? How may we help you?" said Mum nervously.

Why did the author say that Mum spoke 'nervously'?

---

"Treasure?" said Clare, liking the sound of what she had heard.

"Aye, me bonny lassie, treasure. It says 'ere that X marks the spot and somewhere around 'ere, in this 'ere garden, lies the treasure of Davy Jones," said the pirate.

"Who's Davy Jones?" asked Clare. The pirate's face dropped.

"Why, you're dafter than a sponge," uttered the pirate. "Davy Jones is only the most famous pirate that's ever sailed the Seven Seas," he explained, standing up in the paddling pool and swinging his sword left and right. Mum pulled Clare backwards, out of the way.

"I say, I say," the pirate continued. 'There'll be some golden coins in it for you land lubbers if you help me to find my bounty," he said.

Clare looked at Mum. She didn't need to say anything – her face said it all. She smiled at Mum sweetly with a twinkle in her eye.

"Okay, okay, but we've only got fifteen minutes," agreed Mum. "Dinner will get cold."

---